

PRESENTED BY STANFORD CENTER FOR LYMPHATIC AND VENOUS DISORDERS

World Lymphedema Day at Stanford

Support World Lymphedema Day!

March 6 has been designated by the U.S. Congress as World Lymphedema Day. To commemorate the day, Stanford Center for Lymphatic Disorders is hosting a free public educational event. Included will be an overview talk about lymphedema presented by Dr. Stanley G. Rockson, Professor of Lymphatic Research and Medicine. The Stanford Center and its active clinical research program will be discussed. Relevant lymphedema educational materials will be distributed and there will be an extended Q&A session.

Patients, family members, physicians, healthcare providers and all interested community members are welcome!

March 6, 2018
9am – 11am

Lucile Packard
Children's Hospital
Stanford Auditorium
725 Welch Road
West Building, Suite 180
Palo Alto, CA 94304

